Update from Glencairn Museum – *The Sad News: The museum is very disappointed they will not be holding Medieval Summer Camp this year, although they are “excited about the future of summer camp...and are already working on new and improved updates for...the coming years.”

The Good News:

1. Self-guided, in person Family Adventure Tour is being launched on May 4 (Tuesday and Thursday mornings, Tuesday-Friday afternoons, and weekend afternoons). Geared toward K-8th grade and their families. Modeled after a choose-your-own-adventure style book. Six medieval-themed adventures, all based on the first-floor and outdoor gardens of the museum. Booking and ticketing details will be available soon at www.glencairnmuseum.org. “While this is by no means a substitute for summer camp, we are very excited about it and hope that you and your family are able to come and check it out!”
2. “Also being launched, a free, digitally accessible four-part video mini-series based on our Ancient Cultures education program. Each week throughout the month of May, beginning May 10, we will be releasing a new video presented by our educators in our cultural galleries. Each video will be accompanied by a selection of at-home-friendly projects, activities and resources to learn more! The cultures we visit will include the Ancient Near East, Ancient Egypt, Ancient Greece, and Rome. Everything will be made available on our educational resources page here: <https://glencairnmuseum.org/educational-resources>”
